Councilor Yoon Addresses Neighborhood Violence on WBUR

The Boston Police Department has identified the intersection of Geneva Avenue and Waldeck Street as a "hot spot" of violent crime. The home of City Councilor Sam Yoon is just two blocks from where shootings took place this month.

On August 16th, Councilor Yoon appeared on WBUR radio to discuss the rash of recent violence in the city. The radio program, Violence Close to Home, was hosted by Delores Handy-Brown.

Councilor Yoon commented on how the violence has affected his family, the need for long-term strategies and the significance of social capital.

On a weekly basis, the office receives dozens of calls from residents who need assistance for various issues: accessing city services, gathering housing and tenant
